Welcome to the Anglo-American Law Degree at UCP

Our Law School has a professional and personal school environment which provides students with the opportunity for a positive legal educational experience. Our classes are small enough to allow our students to know their professors. We encourage you to enroll for our unique law degree which will give you theoretical and practical legal training in Anglo-American Law. We look forward to you becoming a part of our program at UCP Law School.

Anglo-American Law Degree

A World Class Education

The Anglo-American Law Degree at UCP School of Law recognizes that a world class attorney needs a world class education. Anglo-American Law is increasingly influential in the fields of law, business, government and political policy around the world. Lawyers, business and political leaders and professionals who wish to advance their career opportunities in the International arena recognize the essential need for training in Anglo-American Law. UCP has designed the Anglo-American Law Degree with this global objective in mind.

Learn to Think Like a Lawyer

The Anglo-American Law Degree is built upon both a theoretical and practical law experience. Law Professors include both academically trained professors and experienced attorneys from a variety of fields and from different countries. Those UCP Law Professors who have practiced law bring practical courtroom knowledge and attorney experience into the classroom. This provides UCP students the opportunity to learn how to think like a lawyer and practice being a lawyer in a classroom/courtroom setting. This feature of legal education is an especially interesting and beneficial experience to law students who attend UCP School of Law.

International Legal Training in English

The Anglo-American Law Degree at UCP is offered in English, which reinforces the English language skills of our students within the context of Anglo-American legal terminology and practice. This gives our students an in-depth understanding of the Anglo-American legal profession in preparation for legal careers in International Law Firms. This also provides educational opportunities to international students from around the world who speak English and who desire to obtain a legal education in France. The program offers courses to students at the Licence, Master 1 and Master 2 levels. This gives a rich and comprehensive legal training experience to the legal student, regardless of educational level. At UCP School of Law, we are training attorneys for the practice of law anywhere in the world, and providing legal knowledge for professional and business careers around the globe.

An Ethical Legal Education Combining Law with Ethics

UCP School of Law is a leader in providing ethical legal education to the global community in the context of being one of the highest ranking law schools in France while serving an international student body. UCP School of Law provides rigorous legal education in diverse and distinct legal disciplines which gives students opportunity to choose from a variety of specializations and continue through post-graduate and International degrees. The focus on ethics and ethical foundations is a major strength of UCP Law. UCP School of Law is synonymous with progressive and cutting edge legal education which provides strong, ethical and comprehensive foundations for the 21st century lawyer who practices in an increasingly global environment.

Anglo-American law has become influential around the world. Attorneys, governments, businesses and policy-makers are experiencing these legal influences in their countries on a regular basis. Our Law School is here to help international attorneys and professionals to become knowledgeable and trained in Anglo-American law so that they may be able to successfully manage their transactions in the ever-increasing global environment.

What our students are saying about the Anglo-American Law Program

« The Anglo-American Program taught in English helped me improve my English and develop skills mixing English and Law. This training enables students to learn English and American Law but also to think and act as American or English lawyers through different modules such as Moot Court, Legal Methodology or Writing Contracts. Our teachers are well trained and come from varied backgrounds (America, Australia or Scotland for example), which helps us have really broad knowledge. Team work, oral presentation and writing briefs are for most of us things that are going to be part of our future life, and this program allows us to have a practical law experience. »

Wanda Bellaiche
(Master 1 droit des affaires parcours droit anglo-américain)

« Currently a fourth year student in Business Law and Ethics at the University of Cergy-Pontoise, I've been following the Anglo-American law program since my first year of law school. I chose to continue with the program in Master 1 because I was interested in the more practical direction of the courses, such as American civil procedure, legal writing, moot court and human rights. Three of us who are Masters 1 students at UCP participated recently in an intensive research program of the European Union, during which we had to perform a moot court. Our experience of mooting at UCP during your seminars in the Anglo-American Program was very helpful, and we were considered to be one of the best teams on the exercise, even though, contrary to most of the others students, English is not our mother tongue. »
